Bearing Testimony

Last weekend, I talked about the poignant account of the man born blind, which is recounted in John 9. The blind man's encounter with the healing love of God provides a metaphor for all who have come to see Christ as the light of the world. Each and every one of us was blind, but now we see. In that gospel passage, Jesus says, "While I am in the world, I am the light of the world." Through our baptism, we are "enlightened" and become (and are commanded to be) the light of Christ in the world around us. Consider, in that light, last week's second reading from St. Paul's letter to the Ephesians, in which he reminds us of the mystery of our redemption, and how we are bound to live as Christians:

Brothers and sisters: You were once darkness, but now you are light in the Lord. Live as children of light, for light produces every kind of goodness and righteousness and truth. Try to learn what is pleasing to the Lord. Take no part in the fruitless works of darkness; rather expose them, for it is shameful even to mention the things done by them in secret; but everything exposed by the light becomes visible, for everything that becomes visible is light. (Ephesians 5:8-13, emphasis added).

These sober words are difficult to accept and to live by. But we must! We Christians, regardless of what the world or our friends or family tell us, need to live as light in our time. And that's true even if it means being thrown out of the "synagogue of polite/elite culture" or the "synagogue of social media." The man born blind testified simply to what had happened to him. And he suffered as a result. The lesson is clear: Even if many reject Jesus and/or the teachings of the Church, we don't have that option. We are commanded (and, thanks be to God, given the grace) to live as the light. But doing so might well mean being rejected or excluded or persecuted on account of Christ and the truth we find in Him.

Expect to be Rejected

Brothers and sisters, we are living at a time and in a place in which the culture is embracing radically flawed views of what it means to be human, and indoctrinating children in the false claims of "gender ideology." We must stand as a sign of contradiction against this. Our job is to cling to the truth about ourselves, about reality, and about the Lord. And we must, as the blind man did, bear witness in simple, straightforward ways. Be assured. People are watching us, especially children. Let us be witnesses, come what may . . . come whatever may. And take heart! Recall that just a few months ago, we heard Jesus say the following:

"Blessed are you when men hate you, and when they exclude you and revile you, and cast out your name as evil, on account of the Son of man! Rejoice in that day, and leap for joy, for behold, your reward is great in heaven; for so their fathers did to the prophets." Luke 6:22-23

Blessed are you! That's impossible to believe unless we hold onto Jesus, who is the way, the truth, and the life. This is fundamental for all Christians. This is doubly vital for parents. You have pledged to train your children in the ways of faith. The challenge of parenting well is greater now than it was fifty years ago, even if it's never been easy. As a parish, we are committed to being a place where the truth can be proclaimed and lived, come what may . . . come whatever may.

Holding the Line: What Is a Woman?

As I mentioned last weekend, a particular challenge we face today stems from the rise of gender ideology. We have all seen its ill-effects. With many others, religious and otherwise, I am convinced that it is a fitting, necessary, place for all of us, each and every one of us, to "take a stand." Just as the man born blind spoke with simple, straightforward honesty about what had happened to him, we need to offer common sense responses to things that have "problematized," or are increasingly cast as "in doubt" or "complicated." Confusion around sex and gender has grown, and a new "consensus" has emerged such that even a supreme court nominee, Ketanji Brown Jackson, would feel it either prudent or necessary to assert that she was not qualified to answer the question "what is a woman?" Until the day before yesterday, everyone knew what a woman was. (The sad situation of intersex does not change the fact, but rather demonstrates the pain of not being either-or.) Those who claim that we need experts to help us understand the complexity of sex and gender remind me of those that George Orwell called the "Party" in his 1949 novel, Nineteen Eighty-four, which I quoted from last week: The Party told you to reject the evidence of your eyes and ears. It was their final, most essential command. His heart sank as he thought of the enormous power arrayed against him, the ease with which any Party intellectual would overthrow him in debate, the subtle arguments which he would not be able to understand, much less answer. And yet he was in the right! They were wrong and he was right. The obvious, the silly, and the true had got to be defended. Truths are true, hold on to that! The solid world exists, its laws do not change. Stones are hard, water is wet, objects unsupported fall toward the earth's center. With the feeling that he was speaking to O'Brien, and also that he was setting forth an important axiom, he wrote:

Freedom is the freedom to say that two plus two make four. If that is granted, all else follows. (Emphasis in original)

We are given the truth about Christ and about the world, and we are commanded to live and proclaim that truth . . . for our own sake, for the sake of our children, and for the sake of the world. Let us not shrink back . . . any of us!

Clinging with you to Christ and the conviction that two plus two make four,

Father Steve
