School Auction Tonight (Saturday, November 9)

I am very glad that we have a school at our parish. The fruits of that ministry are growing, and we pray that all of our students, faculty, staff, and families will become the saints we are “making.” Each year, we have an auction that allows members of the school, parish, and community to gather in order to celebrate the school, to enjoy food and fellowship, and to participate in a silent and live auction. This year’s auction will be November 9 after the evening Mass. Join us in Mercy Hall. It is a great time and a worthy cause! The charge is nominal. $10 per person, $15 per couple, and $5 for seniors. We want you to come, so the cost is minimal. Please join us, and help us raise money to support families who want to partner with us for the education of their students. Thanks!

John Paul II Healing Center Retreat

As I mentioned in the bulletin last weekend, I am on retreat this week, assisting as chaplain for a priest’s retreat entitled “Holy Desire.” As is always the case, the teaching, fellowship, and times of prayer have been very rich and fruitful. It never ceases to amaze me how the Holy Spirit works to bring healing to our hearts. I’m struck by the broken hearts of the priests here, who, like myself, benefit greatly from the vulnerability of honest self-reflection, of pulling back the protective walls to allow our hearts to be pierced by the love of God and of our Mother Mary. Please pray for the priests and for me, and for the John Paul II Healing Center staff, that we will continue to be open to the Lord’s leading, to allow our hearts to be healed so that we can more effectively be healers of souls in the Healer of Souls, who is the Lord. Come, Holy Spirit!

God’s Providence and Healing

God will heal our hearts, if we are open to viewing our past from the aspect of Love: . . . When we see our past in the light of the Holy Spirit, with the eyes of God, it is created anew. What we pray for in the Psalms comes true: “Make us glad as many days as you have afflicted us, and as many years as we have seen evil” (Ps 90:15). We receive a completely new past. The best moment for this transformation of our past is, of course, at the Eucharist. Do we really mean it when we say: “Say but the word and I shall be healed?” He comes to us to heal all wounds, to transform all sorrow into joy. Do we give him the opportunity to heal us? Do we show him our wounds? We pray: “In your wounds you hide me.” “By his wounds you have been healed,” we read in the first letter of Peter (2:24). The more we come in contact with these wounds, the more all of our wounds heal. In the Eucharist, the Lord comes to us wounded and sacrificed. That is the right moment to pray:

*“Jesus, heal these wounds.” As soon as you show him your wounds and expose yourself to his healing power, the healing process begins, one that is not like ordinary healing. It is not a question of something old that has caused you much pain and finally ceases to torment you. The healing goes back into time and transforms the very moment when you were hurt into a moment of grace. The very wound that was the cause of so much suffering is transformed into a blessing, and all the bitterness it caused is changed into meaningful and fruitful suffering. When Israel could not drink the water in Marah because of its bitterness, Moses called out to the Lord: “. . . he cried to the Lord; and the Lord showed him a tree, and he threw it into the water, and the water became sweet” (Ex 15:23-25). The wood that we throw into the bitter water is the word “Amen”: it is good as it is, and it was good even then, because you, O God, were there. God was there. That is the very first and most important thing that our reading of the Scriptures can teach us: God is there in everything that happens. In the Bible we are dealing with the first cause, not the second. The most dramatic event in Joseph’s life, when his brothers sold him, was God’s greatest grace. “God sent me before you”, he says to his brothers who came to Egypt to buy grain, “to preserve for you a remnant on earth, and to keep alive for you many survivors. So it was not you who sent me here, but God” (Gen 45:7-8). “You meant evil against me; but God meant it for good, to bring it about that many people should be kept alive, as they are today” (Gen 50:20). (Stinissen, Fr. Wilfrid. Into Your Hands Father: Abandoning Ourselves to the God Who Loves Us (pp. 40-42).)*

God Longs to Heal Our Land

After a very contentious and factious election season, I am writing this on the morning of November 6. I am grateful that the electoral vote and the popular vote align with one another. If they had not, we would be dealing, I’m sure, with a tremendous amount of protest and rejection of the result. There will still be significant pushback to the outcome of the presidential election, but our job now is clear. We must pray for our nation, for the transition of leadership, and for healing of our Land. We Christians are called to be the soul of the nation, and are called and graced to be salt, light, and leaven in our world. May we be witnesses of the One who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life. And may God bless the United States of America.

May God heal all our hearts and our world,

Father Steve
